

Elterdale Grey Green Slate

Elterdale Grey Green slate is quarried using very simple extraction techniques, from the finest slate beds in the Paraopeba Valley near Papagaios. Elterdale Grey Green slate is a natural sedimentary stone with excellent consistency which required the minimum of grading. The natural slates are hand split by experienced craftsmen to produce consistent slates in thickness and texture.

The Grey Green colour of the slate is a very good alternative to the much higher specification Vermont Structural Unfading Green and Westmorland Green slates

The Brazilian slate industry has become one of the major supply sources of natural roofing slate, with Elterdale® Grey Green being produced by a well regarded and internationally backed quarry and production facilities where quality of the finished product and the level of service provided count as the principles of owners.

We produce the slate in a wide variety of sizes, including Fixed Length x Random Widths and also a Diminishing Courses x Random Widths option. The thickness spec varies depending on the required size option from 7-9mm to 8-10mm and even a 9-11mm.

Fully Tested to BSEN12326-1:2004, attaining A1, T1 & S1 certification.
